Q 19:

Write an essay or story beginning with the following sentence.

"It was 6:00 in the morning on a day in November."

✓ A1 —

It was 6:00 in the morning on a day in November. I was sitting up on the bed and thought that another ordinary day had begun.

After a while, when I was having breakfast, I heard the door slam shut. That was because my husband had gone outside the house. Then I realized that he was going to take his 14-year-old dog, Momo-chan, to the vet. She had not eaten anything for two days.

When I came back from work at noon, my husband said that she was getting an IV drip at the vet's. At that time, he seemed to believe that she would get better soon and come home.

But the moment arrived suddenly. I got a phone call from the doctor. "Momo-chan passed away a little while ago," he said. We were very shocked.

In the afternoon, we went to pick her up. My husband wasn't able to control his tears while the doctor explained the process.

Momo-chan was my husband's dog, not mine. He had been taking care of everything for her.

When I was in bed at night, my eyes were filled with tears. Momo-chan, I would like to say thank you for coming to our house and taking care of my husband. (208 words)

★ Concise Feedback

Your writing is emotionally powerful and sincere. You used clear sequencing (“after a while,” “at noon,” “in the afternoon”), which makes the story easy to follow. The final message to Momo-chan is touching and ends the essay beautifully.

The main areas to keep working on are:

- verb tenses (past perfect: had begun, had gone)
- spelling (vet, realized, explained)
- avoiding small mistakes with articles and prepositions

But overall, the heart of the story is very strong.

💬 Encouragement for the Students

You expressed difficult emotions with honesty and warmth, which is not easy in a second language. Keep writing—each paragraph you write helps your grammar improve and your confidence grow. Your voice is clear, and your English will continue to become more natural with practice. Great work—please keep going!

電話する

 4. “Ken!” と呼ぶ → call, “Ken!” / call out, “Ken!”

✓ A2 —

It was 6:00 in the morning on the 12th of November. I went to the hotel restaurant to have breakfast. I had stayed there the night before. The hotel was close to Nagoya Airport. Several men in dark suits were already eating.

I knew there were some big companies nearby because I had noticed them when I checked in last evening. Most of the guests seemed to be businessmen. I had a Japanese-style breakfast and coffee. It tasted good, I remember thinking.

I hadn't slept well the previous night. I went to bed at about 10:00, but I had trouble falling asleep. Even so, I eventually slept, but I woke up at 2:00 a.m. I tried to calm down and sleep again but soon gave up and got out of bed.

My own fun trip — two nights and three days on Tsushima Island — was beginning from Nagoya Airport that morning.

★ Feedback for A2

What you did well:

- You wrote clearly about your experience and kept good chronological order.
- The details about the businessmen, breakfast, and lack of sleep created a realistic scene.

How to improve:

- Be careful with past tense consistency (“I knew,” “I noticed,” etc.).
- Try to combine short sentences for smoother flow.
- Avoid unnecessary prepositions like “near to.”

Encouragement:

You have a strong foundation! Your storytelling is easy to follow, and with small adjustments to grammar, your writing will feel even more natural. Keep writing—you’re improving steadily!

✓ A3 —

It was 6:00 in the morning on a day in November.

I woke up to the sound of my alarm. Normally, it would be an ordinary morning, but today was different.

I felt hot under the futon and kicked it off. Then I noticed my hands—they were covered in black hair and had long, sharp claws.

I stood up quickly and looked in the mirror. My whole body was covered in black hair.

I looked like a bear.

No—I was a bear.

As soon as I got up, I tried to call my husband, but I couldn’t speak human language. Then I heard my son coming.

“What should I do?” I thought.

I hid under the futon and pretended to be asleep.

I thought maybe I should hibernate, because if I went outside, someone might kill me. And I hadn't eaten enough food to survive the winter yet.

When I woke up again, I saw my husband's worried face, and I realized it was already noon. (168 words)

★ Feedback for A3

What you did well:

- Very creative and fun storyline!
- You used clear emotional reactions (“What should I do?”) that make the story engaging.
- Excellent imagination and suspense.

How to improve:

- Watch verb tenses (“I stand up” → “I stood up”).
- Articles like a/the need careful attention.
- “Mirrow” → “mirror” and similar spelling corrections.

Encouragement:

This was such an entertaining and imaginative story! You have a talent for creative writing. With more practice on grammar and spelling, your storytelling ability will shine even more. Keep going—you're doing great!

Marley: Learning Japanese is easier than learning English.

Tada: That may be true when it comes to speaking and listening, but reading and writing are a different story, though, aren't they?

Marley: Writing? Ah, oh... For speaking, Japanese feels easier to me because Japanese has fewer vowel sounds than English.

-Below are just fantasies about what I wish I could say.-

- (以下、こんなこと言えればいいのにつて妄想っす) -

Tada: Ah, I see — you mean speaking-wise. That makes sense, especially when you think about the vowel system.

Pronouncing Japanese can feel less stressful than pronouncing English because there are fewer vowel sounds.

And for you, 'learning a language' usually starts with the sound system — listening and speaking, right?

In Japan, though, we tend to approach language learning from the opposite direction, starting with reading and writing, so that's the angle that I was coming from.

Q 20:

Write an essay or story titled “The Year 2026”

✓ A1 —

I’m going to talk about what I want to do in 2026. I’d like to keep studying with all of you and improve my English.

I wonder how many years have passed since we first met. Time goes by so fast. At that time, it was difficult for me to understand native English. However, little by little, I have started to get the hang of it.

Practice makes perfect.

I couldn’t have continued without everyone. I’m looking forward to studying together again this year. (84 words)

✓ A2 —

When the New Year countdown begins, I am finally alone, looking back on the past year.

However, I soon get sleepy and fall asleep.

A morning without an alarm comes on New Year’s Day. In my bright room, I find myself in the year 2026. I am thinking about 2026 by myself.

My goal this year is to take the math test called “Suken.”
I’m excited to take it.

Every year, I set a goal and keep trying.

So every year, there is always something to do.

Next year, it might be better to set a goal to take a day off.

(102 words)

✓ A3 —

The year 2026 began.

First, I must take care of my health. In February, I will go to the hospital to have my stomach checked. I made a reservation. Last April, I found out that I had a polyp in my stomach. I hope it has not gotten worse.

In June, I have to renew my driver’s license. That makes me unhappy. I’m not very good at driving these days. Maybe it is because of aging. I feel a little afraid.

So I wanted something happy. I decided to take a trip to Portugal in October for one week. I called a travel agent and reserved a women-only tour with a private room and a tour guide. There is still plenty of time, but I hope this trip will bring me happiness.

Let’s enjoy life. (135 words)

This trip will bring me happiness. / Give me chocolate.

"The storm soon spent its force." (Feels like classic English literature.)

→ In very modern casual English:

The storm soon died down.

The storm quickly lost its strength.

"The wild fire soon spent its force." Feels like 19th–early 20th c. writing.

→ In everyday modern conversation:

The wildfire soon burned out.

The wildfire was quickly brought under control.

The fire soon ran out of fuel.

Q 21:

Write an essay or story titled, "Kohaku Uta Gassen" or "The Showa era is long gone."

✓ A1 —

Kōhaku Uta Gassen

Kōhaku Uta Gassen is a TV program that takes place once a year.

For me, it is like Christmas or visiting a shrine on New Year's Day.

I have two reasons for this feeling.

The first reason is that my growth and life have become fond memories connected with Kōhaku Uta Gassen. For example, when I was a child, my friends and I often talked about the program. We each had our favorite singers.

The second reason is that after the Tokyo Olympics in 1964, many people watched TV together and were very happy to enjoy programs like Kōhaku Uta Gassen.

Therefore, I still look forward to watching this TV program now. (112 words)

Kōhaku Uta Gassen

I watched Kōhaku Uta Gassen for the first time in years. Near the end of the show, Kenshi Yonezu performed with my favorite girl group, HANA. I was very excited to see them, but even more impressed by Kenshi Yonezu's voice.

After that, I looked him up, and a song called "JANE DOE" came up. It is the ending theme song of an animated movie, and he sang it as a duet with the famous singer Hikaru Utada. After listening to the song, I was almost in tears, even though I had not watched the movie. It was sad, painful, emotional, and also powerful. I was completely overwhelmed.

He is a very gifted musician to be able to write a song like this. Recently, I have been really into this song. However, I feel that watching the movie itself might be too painful for me. (145 words)

The Shōwa Era Is Long Gone

I was born in the Shōwa era and belong to the baby boomer generation. When I entered high school, I had to take very difficult entrance exams.

There were many students at that time. After entering high school, I realized that there were 50 students in each class, and there were 11 classes in the first grade (and 12 classes in the second grade). The school buildings were built in the Meiji era, and two additional prefabricated school buildings had been added.

Because there were so many students, we even went on a school trip using a chartered ship for our school. We traveled by ship from Tanabe Port in Wakayama Prefecture to Ube Port in Yamaguchi Prefecture. Then we visited Nagasaki and Beppu by bus, and finally returned from Ōita Port to Tanabe through the Seto Inland Sea. We truly enjoyed the trip.

Many, many years have passed since then. The Shōwa era is indeed long gone. (159 words)

 A1 —

I agree with the opinion that smartphones are bad for children's lives.

For example, smartphones damage their eyes and cause a lack of sleep. Also, they play with smartphones all the time, so they don't listen to what others are saying.

Furthermore, there is a lot of false information on social media. Children and teenagers have poor judgment, so they easily believe the information.

Therefore, children and teenagers should not be allowed to use any social media until they are 18 years old. (83 words)

 A2 —

I agree.

“Children and teenagers should not be allowed to use any social media until they are 18 years old.” I have two reasons.

The first reason is that they have little experience and knowledge and are likely to encounter dangerous problems. For example, they may be led to dangerous sites and become criminals.

The second reason is that they spend too much time on social networking sites, which can lead to a variety of problems. For example, if children primarily socialize online, they will not develop important social skills that they will need later in life.

Therefore, children and teenagers should not be allowed to use any social media until they are 18 years old. (116 words)

 A3 —

“Children and teenagers should not be allowed to use any social media until they are 18 years old .”

I completely agree.

They sometimes make irresponsible statements. They do not consider how other people feel. The content can lead to bullying in school or society. When a rumor comes from them, it may hurt someone.

Another problem is time differences. Social media connects people all over the world. For example, one boy in Japan plays online with another boy in the U.S.A. or Europe. Because of the time difference, he sleeps very little.

He wants to sleep at school when he has to study. His mother wants him to stop playing in the middle of the night or early morning (5:00 a.m.), but he does not listen to her advice. She is worried about him. This situation continues.

So, in this case, I think she has to take the device away from him. Her son is only 12 years old. (159 words)

No, I don't agree with this part of the statement: "any social media."

My point is that we should be careful when someone uses words like "all," "any," "absolute," or "never."

I don't care much whether the age is 18, 16, or even in the twenties. There are certainly some adults who shouldn't be allowed to use such things. Don't you think so? It's fine if you, as a parent, decide not to allow your children to use social media. But I strongly oppose forbidding everyone from doing something.

From the point of view of human rights, freedom of speech is one of the most important rights. We have to cherish it, and we must foster it through education. Social media are no exception—they are powerful tools for expressing feelings, emotions, and opinions.

Even children and teenagers should not be completely prevented from using such tools. A tool is just a tool—nothing more. The real issue is how we use it. Of course, as I mentioned, if some parents have a different opinion and choose not to allow it in their own families, that is fine. That is their responsibility. This is how we maintain balance in society.

Again, a tool is just a tool. The problem does not lie in the tool itself, but in how we use it. Therefore, I do not agree with the statement. A liberal society can remain healthy only if freedom is protected. I would like to take part in such a healthy and balanced society. (254 words)

1-Minute Speech

No, I don't agree with the statement, especially the phrase "any social media." We should be careful with extreme words like "all" or "never."

I don't think age alone should decide this. Even some adults use social media irresponsibly. On the other hand, many young people can use it wisely. It's fine if parents choose to limit their own children, but I don't think we should forbid everyone.

From the point of view of human rights, freedom of speech is very important. Social media can be a powerful tool to express ideas and opinions. What matters is not the tool itself, but how we use it.

So, instead of banning social media, we should teach people how to use it responsibly. That is how we can build a healthy and balanced society. (132 words)

1-Minute Speech (with Strong Opening & Closing)

Imagine a world where young people are not allowed to speak, share, or express themselves online
until they turn eighteen.
Is that really the kind of society we want?

No, I don't agree with the statement, especially the phrase
“any social media.”
We should be careful with extreme words like “all” or “never.”

First of all, in this case, age alone should not decide it.
Even some adults use social media irresponsibly, while many young people can use it wisely.

Of course, It's fine if parents choose to limit their own children, but we should not forbid every kid.

Besides, from the point of view of human rights, freedom of speech is very important.
Social media can be a powerful tool to express ideas and opinions.

What matters is not the tool itself, but how we use it.

So, instead of taking voices away, let's learn and teach how to use our voices responsibly to foster the freedom of speech.

Because a healthy society is not built by silence—but by mutual understanding through dialogue. (175)

Q 23:

My favorite TV program / movie / YouTube etc.

✓ A1 —

My favorite TV program is (英雄たちの選択), “The Shape Course of History.” It is my number one favorite. I like history, and I am curious about many different kinds of famous people. I watch it at 9:00 p.m. on Mondays on BS NHK.

Another program I like is “Cats Walking in the World” (世界猫歩き). I always watch it and feel relaxed and healed every time.

I also like “Walking in the World Streets” (世界街歩き). I enjoy seeing places I have never visited before. I hope I can go to those places someday. (111)

✓ A2 —

I watch many different kinds of videos on YouTube. Among them, I like a channel called “Bucket List” It is run by a couple who want to work on a global scale.

They often post videos of their daily life. They have twin babies—one is a boy and the other is a girl. They are very cute. Watching them eat is my favorite. They bang their hands on the table to ask for food quickly. I have been watching their videos since they were in their mother's belly. March 11th is their first birthday.

They have already traveled abroad three times, even though they are only one year old, because their parents are planning to move overseas this year. I'm looking forward to watching them speak English. (128)

✓ A3 —

My favorite movie is “Anne of Green Gables.” I have been reading this story since I was a child. I have two reasons for liking it.

The first reason is its interesting story. A red-haired girl who was raised in an orphanage grows into a woman who is loved by everyone. She learns unconditional love from her adoptive parents, and they feel happy watching her grow. When I was a child, I wanted to be like Anne, but now I want to be like her adoptive mother, Marilla Cuthbert.

The second reason is the natural beauty of Prince Edward Island. It is known for its breathtaking scenery, such as red cliffs, green hills, and beautiful coastal views.

Therefore, I strongly recommend this movie. (123)

-ing vs to -

- ① You must be happy watching your son grow.
- ② You must be happy to watch your son grow.

👉 The real difference is meaning, not time

♦ Core Difference

-ing = experience / process / in the middle of doing it to - = about the idea or chance / plan / purpose

- ✅ ① You must be happy watching your son grow.

👉 Meaning:

You are experiencing it now.

You feel happy as you watch him grow day by day.

👉 Paraphrase:

→ You must be happy seeing him grow every day.

- ✅ ② You must be happy to watch your son grow.

👉 Meaning:

It is a happy thing/opportunity in general.

👉 Paraphrase:

→ You must be happy to have the chance to see him grow.

Q 24:

Write a short story about a character who overcomes a challenge or obstacle.

 A1:

I'm going to join a patchwork club in Kiho Town starting this April. I have been curious about it for a long time. The other day, I visited the club. There were about ten people sewing their own patchwork items. How nice they were! I was surprised to see them. I had only seen such things in shops before.

I want to learn. It may be hard for me to make something with patchwork, since it is such fine, delicate work. The people at the club were friendly and peaceful. I will join next month. It meets once a month on Saturday afternoon.

The Story of Mao Asada

Mao Asada is one of the most beloved figure skaters in Japan. She started figure skating when she was only five years old and made rapid progress. At age fourteen, she became the youngest skater to land a triple axel, which is one of the most difficult jumps for women. With her success, many people paid attention to her.

She used to enjoy skating, but she started to feel pressure as she grew up. At the 2010 Vancouver Olympics, the entire nation expected her to win a gold medal. However, she missed out, even though she landed three triple axels. She was deeply discouraged. The following year, she lost her mother, who had always supported her. She was completely devastated physically and mentally.

She struggled with her jumps and thought about retiring. However, she could not stop loving skating. She began practicing harder and decided to compete in the Sochi Olympics. In the short program, she made mistakes and received the worst ranking of her career. She felt hopeless.

But after encouragement from her sister, she skated the free program with strong determination. She landed all her jumps beautifully. Although she did not win a medal, her performance moved many people. Her tears shone brighter than any gold medal. (214 words)

Q & A: V 期

Q 25:

Do you agree or disagree with the following statement:

“More tourists should be encouraged to visit Japan.”

A1:

I agree.

One of the main reasons Japanese companies can effectively participate in the global economy is the use of English. Therefore, when more tourists visit Japan, Japanese people can gain more opportunities to communicate in English and accumulate valuable experiences.

Japanese students today are required to study English from a young age. This means that young Japanese people are generally better at English than previous generations.

As a result, they are more likely to become interested in visiting other countries and using their English skills.

However, if more tourists visit Japan, young people can also gain international experiences without leaving Japan.

Therefore, more tourists should be encouraged to vist Japan. (111 words)

★ Feedback

- Good logical structure with clear reasons.
- Nice connection between tourism and English education.
- Try to avoid repeating the same expressions (“gain experiences”).

👍 Encouragement:

You explained your opinion clearly and logically. Your ideas about language and globalization are thoughtful and persuasive.

✎ A2:

I agree that foreign tourists should come to Japan.

However, overtourism is not good. For example, tourists have concentrated in Kyoto in recent years. People who live in Kyoto sometimes cannot use buses for their daily lives because they are full of tourists from abroad.

Last autumn, my daughter and her son went to a traditional gassho-zukuri village in Hida on a bus tour. The tour started at the Nagoya bus terminal. All the passengers except the two of them were foreigners. My grandson, who is eleven years old, got off the bus and walked on a snow-covered road. He slipped and fell down. A foreign tourist nearby quickly helped him.

My daughter said, “We could learn English from tourists from abroad.” (122 words)

🌟 Feedback

- Very interesting real-life example.
- Good balance between positive and negative points.
- Work on articles and plural forms (“tourists,” “buses,” “foreigners”).

👍 Encouragement:

Your essay feels realistic and sincere. The story about your grandson made your opinion easy to understand and memorable.

✎ A3:

I half agree and half disagree with this topic.

First, I agree that inbound tourists bring profits to hotels, shops, restaurants, and transportation industries.

Therefore, the visit of many tourists to Japan brings great benefits to the Japanese economy. This should be welcomed.

On the other hand, there are some tourists who do not follow the rules and have bad manners. The other day, I saw an old woman yelling at a young foreign man on TV. She said, “Hey, you! No smoking here! What if this World Heritage Site is destroyed by fire?” I admired her because only a few people in Japan would openly say something like that.

I think tourists tend to flock to famous tourist spots. I hope they will visit rural areas as well. (129 words)

🌟 Feedback

- Very balanced opinion with both advantages and disadvantages.
- Strong use of a concrete example.
- Good conclusion about rural tourism.

👍 Encouragement:

Your essay shows mature thinking and balance. You considered both economic benefits and social problems very well.

✎ A4:

Good afternoon, everyone.

Today, I would like to talk about whether more tourists should be encouraged to visit Japan.

I agree with this idea, as long as tourism helps promote social mobility. Social mobility is one of the important forces that helps society develop.

First, we should allow as many people as possible, including foreign tourists, to move freely. When people are free to move, society becomes more flexible. This flexibility gives people hope that they can do many things and become who they want to be.

This kind of freedom creates energy and dynamism. It can also revitalize the economy. When society becomes more open and economic activity increases, economic prosperity is likely to follow.

Of course, there are some concerns. Too many tourists may create uncertainty or social instability. Tourism can also cause friction between people, especially when cultural differences are difficult to overcome. We should not ignore these problems.

However, I believe these problems should be solved through proper political measures. They should not be used as reasons to restrict freedom of movement.

Freedom is one of the most important human rights. It gives people energy, hope, and opportunity.

Therefore, I believe more tourists should be encouraged to visit Japan, as long as tourism promotes social mobility and supports sustainable social development.

Q 26:

A Magical Day: Imagine you or somebody woke up tomorrow and discovered they had a superpower. What is it, and how do they use it?

A1: Superpower

One morning, I woke up to find that I had a superpower that granted three wishes.

My first wish was that everything I touched would be healed. My own body, other people's bodies, and even objects would be fixed. If I touched my hair, my white, or gray, hair would turn black again. I could erase my wrinkles, and my back pain would go away.

My second wish was to become fluent in English. Then I could talk with foreigners without being nervous.

My third wish was to win the lottery, but not too much. Then I would gain enough money to live comfortably, support my four children, and build a single-story house on a hill. Then all my worries would be gone. (124 words)

My third wish was to win the lottery, but (it was] not (to win) too much.

My third wish was to win the lottery, but (I did) not (want to win) too much.

☀ Feedback

The three wishes are clear, practical, and easy to understand.

Good specific details, such as turning gray hair black and making back pain disappear.

The wishes show concern not only for yourself but also for other people and your family.

👍 Encouragement

Your essay is warm, imaginative, and full of kindness. The most interesting idea is that your healing power can repair not only people but also objects. Your modest wish to win “but not too much” is also charming. It shows that you value a peaceful, comfortable life with your family more than great wealth.

A2:

I have always wanted to have a superpower since the invasion of Ukraine in 2022. My superpower would be this: if the leader of one country killed people in another country, I could punish that leader, and then what happened that day would be undone by the next day.

I have two reasons for wanting this superpower.

The first reason is the lack of ability and morality among some leaders. It seems that their devotion to the people and the country has shifted toward personal gain and ambition.

The second reason is the suffering of ordinary people. Many citizens have lost their lives, property, and hope because of war. My power would be the power to turn any leader who orders someone to kill back into a newborn baby.

Then, as they grew up again, they would reflect on peace.

🌟 Feedback

You chose a serious real-world problem and expressed a strong wish for peace.

The idea of turning a violent leader back into a newborn baby is original and memorable.

Your reasons clearly show how war affects ordinary people.

👍 Encouragement

Your essay shows compassion for people who lose their lives, homes, and hope because of war. The most powerful idea is giving leaders another chance to grow up and learn the importance of peace. It is an imaginative way of saying that people can change if they start again with better values.

A3:

I have a magic key in my brain. With this key, I can go to my special world. In that world, I was a little girl. I went to the countryside, a place I had never been before.

I walked and walked with my friend, an older girl called Tsune-chan. She lived near my house. She had to bring something to her father in the mountains. After walking for about one hour, we reached a riverside.

We crossed a small wooden bridge and went toward the mountain. Then we walked up a little more. Soon, we found a small cabin.

There was a rope with clothes hanging on it between a slim tree and another tree. We could see a big can, like a drum can, near the cabin. It might have been used as a bath. There was an old man with a bald head and a beard. He was small. I thought he was her grandfather, but he was her father. He made rice porridge with Japanese apricot for our lunch.

He was making charcoal there. There was a charcoal kiln. There were some Iris japonica plants around it. We picked them with joy. It was a fantastic, different world for me.

I wanted to come to this place again, but I never could. So, with my magic key, I could return there after about 70 years. If I could go there again, I might be a stranger.

🌟 Feedback

The story contains many vivid details, including the wooden bridge, cabin, charcoal kiln, and rice porridge.

The setting creates a nostalgic and mysterious atmosphere.

The magic key is an effective way to connect the present with a precious childhood memory.

👍 Encouragement

Your essay feels like a journey into a treasured memory. The descriptions of Tsune-chan, her father, and life in the mountains make the special world feel real. The most touching idea is that your superpower allows you to return after about 70 years, even though you may now be a stranger there. It beautifully expresses our wish to revisit places that remain alive in our hearts.
